

Gogo to Offer Gogo Vision on JAL's Domestic Fleet

January 30, 2014

ITASCA, Ill., Jan. 30, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- Gogo (NASDAQ: GOGO), the world leader of in-flight connectivity and a pioneer in wireless in-flight digital entertainment solutions, announced today that it will add Gogo Vision to Japan Airlines' (JAL) entire domestic fleet. Gogo recently announced a partnership with JAL to provide in-flight Internet on the same fleet.

Gogo Vision is Gogo's wireless in-flight entertainment service that allows passengers to rent movies and television shows and stream them to their own Wi-Fi enabled laptops or tablets. The new service, as well as Internet connectivity, is expected to be available to JAL passengers beginning in the summer of 2014.

"Gogo Vision is a natural add-on service to Gogo's connectivity product as it adds very limited incremental costs to the airline once the connectivity service is in place," said Niels Steenstrup, Gogo's senior vice president, global airline sales. "Gogo Vision becomes an extremely low cost way for airlines to offer a robust in-flight entertainment solution to its passengers that they can then stream to their own Wi-Fi enabled devices."

The Gogo Vision platform will contain Japanese produced content as well as JAL original content.

"Adding Gogo Vision to our fleet is just another way for us to bring passengers a unique and completely refreshing onboard experience," said Yoshiharu Ueki, JAL's president. "JAL passengers will be able to use the Internet to stay connected and productive and Gogo Vision will help keep them entertained."
