

Gogo to Partner with American Airlines to add In-flight Internet on Regional Jets

June 5, 2014

Gogo Expected to Begin Installations on New CRJs in June

ITASCA, Ill., June 5, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- Gogo (NASDAQ: GOGO), a leading aero communications service provider to the global aviation industry, announces today that it has reached an agreement with American Airlines to begin installing its ATG connectivity service on 30 new Bombardier CRJ-900 NextGen aircraft, which will be delivered to American starting this month. The additional connected aircraft will build on the more than 850 aircraft in American's fleet that are currently equipped with Gogo's In-flight Internet services.

"American Airlines was the first commercial airline to launch connectivity service with Gogo, and we are excited to continue to build on our longstanding relationship with American by extending Wi-Fi service to passengers flying on its new regional jets," said Gogo's president and CEO, Michael Small.

American currently has Gogo's ATG and ATG-4 service installed on its aircraft. By adding Wi-Fi to these regional jets, more American Airlines passengers will be able to connect.
