

American Express OPEN Offers Complimentary Gogo Benefit for Business Platinum Card® Members

December 15, 2014

Today, we are proud to announce a new partnership with American Express to offer Business Platinum Card Members a complimentary Gogo benefit. The program is called the Gogo Preferred Program and American Express Business Platinum Card® Members will be able to access 10 complimentary Gogo inflight internet passes each calendar year as part of the program. With the Gogo Preferred Program, Card Members will be able to use each pass for inflight Wi-Fi internet access on any Gogo equipped flight segment, including international flights. More information on the benefits of the Business Platinum Card can be found online here.

"American Express has been a great partner and we're excited to continue to build on our relationship by offering Business Platinum Card Members this valuable benefit," said Ash ElDifrawi, Gogo's chief commercial officer. "Business travelers have come to rely on Gogo to stay productive in flight, what better way to connect them than by partnering with a company that's synonymous with business and travel."

"It's important for business owners to stay connected on the go so they can do business efficiently while traveling," said Manish Gupta, Executive Vice President and General Manager of American Express OPEN Products. "That's why we are excited to offer the new Gogo Preferred Program to our Business Platinum Card Members for a more productive travel experience."

Gogo and American Express teamed up in the past to offer similar benefits to American Express Corporate Card Members. The Corporate Card Member Benefit, currently called the Gogo Fee Credit, will be changing to the new Gogo Preferred Program at similar levels to what Card Members enjoy today. The new card member benefit is expected to be available starting early 2015.
